FRANK HOWARD

Or Getting an Endorser.

(CONCLUDED)

He did consult it and his loving helpmate helped him to consider it. After a very hasty deliberation it was unanimously agreed to Play the whole matter on the last.

Mr. Allen was informed of the decision and as old Eagles always do when they cannot do anything else, but flap, and swallowed his words, fully resolved to do what a thing creditable, the first opportunity occurred.

A year after my friend went into business, as I passed us store one morning, I was not a little surprised to find a Board before the window was that originally white cloth device on that the occupant had failed.

I entered the store and found at his desk looking with a most unhappy aspect at his pages in the ledger.

"How is it, Frank?" I asked, and I never was sorry to have uttered it so soon.

"Bust up, I don't you see?" replied he rather petulantly.

"But what does it mean?"

"Mean? Why, that I had a note of a thousand dollars due yesterday, which owing could not pay and this morning my amiable friend Mr Allen put in a report—that's all."

"How does it happen? I thought you was doing a rushing business."

"So I was! but the money to pay that note six weeks ago or I'd a Small note at 90 days a month," replied he with a feelingly sigh.

"And so that's the case?"

"Not exactly. He has topped out everybody save Allen's good—it is time to turn himself."

"And you must make a stall of it, I mean time?"

"If I could only stave off Allen for a couple of months, I could get out of the scrape with flying colors."

"Won't he wait?"

Frank shook his head, he had mortally offended the proud merchant and there was no prospect but he would be let out in the slightest degree.

"Can't you raise the money?"

"No one can have been so hard for years. Everybody is failing and the money men won't trust their own fathers."

At this moment Mr Allen entered the store. He looked at us and severe like one who has the power in his own hands and is disposed to use it. I treated myself into the desk as he approached.

He once more politely saluted the unfortunate clerk, smiling as blandly as though nothing had happened—as though he had no note and Frank was a stone.

"Mr Howard, this is unfortunate; but in the midst of so much commercial disaster you perceive that it was my only course," said the merchant soothingly.

"I suppose it was; but you know the cause of my inability to pay the note," replied Frank with a dogged expression.

"Ah, was so many, you ought not to have let the money to Smith if you had as good my advice I could have told you better."

"Smith was always thought to be good."

The merchant shook his head.

"But Mr Allen give me a short time and I can pay the note! Smith assures me he shall do so presently."

"Mr. Howard, I truly wish you well I have done all I could to give you a fair start."

"So you have, sir, and am very grateful to you."

"Are you?" and the merchant fixed a glance upon the young man.

"I assure you that I am."

"Have you manifested it?" continued the merchant, sternly. "But no matter, we must now do business men."

"Well what shall be done? You have stopped me. I can do no more."

"I don't wish to be hard. I would wait if prudence would justify it," said Mr Allen, who was keenly sensitive in regard to his

In fact he was a man "good feelings and only what he thought to do what was for Frank in love with his wealthy niece I would not have disturbed him.

"You are just as secure two months hence as now," pleaded Frank.

"I have not the confidence in you, Mr Howard—I say it frankly—which I once had. You have cost a thousand dollars. I doubt if your stock under the hammer would pay my claim."

Frank looked savage, for the girl he was confident he was Howard yet, and felt keenly the unjust imputation on the merchant.

"I wish to be fair, and even indulgent," continued Mr Allen, before Frank had time to utter the ungracious sentiment that rose to his lips. Here are the note give me good endorser, and I will wait two months."

Frank looked up and smiled a contempt at the miserable subterfuge of the merchant who meant to crush him, and still preserve an appearance of temperance. He knew it would be almost impossible for the young man, with his stock encumbered, to procure the security.

"Will you take Smith?" asked Frank hurriedly.

"Of course not," replied Mr Allen, with a bland smile.

"I will see what can be done; but I think the case is hopeless."

The merchant withdrew, assured in his own mind that his revenge was safe and his reputation was safe at the same time.

Frank and myself canvassed the matter, but we could think of no person whose mite of human kindness was sufficiently abundant to prompt him to do such an immense act.

While we were debating the matter, Frank was struck up by the entrance of Miss Allen.

"How blooming you look here to-day, Frank," said she, laughing, and showing in the set the prettiest row of pearly teeth that I ever saw.

"Why, Jenny, indeed," replied Frank, sustaining a sickly smile. "But you know the reason?"

"Why what reason?" asked she, her merry expression relapsing into a serious one.

"You see that man?"

"Yes."

"He is a keeper," replied Frank with tragic effect.

"A keeper! of what? Are you insane?" replied the lady playfully, for it must be confessed she was not acquainted with the technicalities o business.

Frank laughed, and explained. His disaster was then overtaken him.

"Poh!" exclaimed she with an appearance of relief, and I really believe if the keeper had myself had not been in the way, she would have thrown her arms around his neck, and kissed away his mortification.

I had before been introduced to the lady, and at this moment advanced to join in the conversation.

"And my uncle is the wretch?" continued she merrily. "But what can you do—how can you get out of it?"

Frank explained the proposition to procure an endorser for the note. The light hearted maiden appeared to have but little sympathy for the misfortunes of her lover, and asked all sorts of questions about endorsers, notes and business forms.

"Where is the note you are to have endorsed?" said she.

"Mr. Allen has it."

"How can you have it endorsed, then?"

"I can write another," replied Frank, smiling at the innocence of his betrothed.

"Then write one," said she promptly.

Frank looked at her a moment to find what mischief was lurking in her mind. She smiled apparently without the power to prevent it. The lover, impelled by curiosity as much as any other motive, wrote the note and signed it.

"Now, how did you endorse it?" said she.

"By writing the name across the back."

The lady approached the desk, and having the note, wrote with two dashes of the pen, "Isabella Allen," across it.

"It is endorsed," said she with a smile that told Frank all she meant.

"But Isabe—"

"Good morning, Frank!" interrupted she, and hastened out of the store.

"Bravo, Frank," I exclaimed.

He smiled doubtfully, his pride was a little touched.

"You did you use it?" said he after a long pause.

"To get it to be sure," said she did get it.

In the afternoon Mr. Allen called satisfied in his own mind that he should witness the complete humility of the young man who had the audacity to fall in love with an heiress. Knowing at what hour he would call, I was careful to be present.

"Well, Mr. Howard, how have you succeeded? I have really been in hopes you will be able to secure the paper," and I could plainly discern the malicious chuckle on his face as he spoke.

"I have succeeded, Mr. Allen, and I am infinitely obliged to you for your good will."

The merchant was totally staggered at the reply. It was wholly unexpected, and wholly unwelcome also.

"I hope you have procured a good one," said he, painfully.

"A wealthy one, but a name unknown on State street."

"Can I take it then?" answered the merchant promptly, and with renewed hope.

"Such a name well known to you," and Frank handed him the note.

Mr. Allen started back with surprise and angrily asked the name of the fair endorser.

"Very well, sir, when a man can resort to such a trick as this I have nothing more to say to him, and the creditable merchant, after throwing the old note on the counter, hastened indignantly from the store.

The keepers was withdrawn, and Frank heard no more from Mr. Allen. A week after Mr. Smith paid the money and Frank took up the note.

Before another of the notes became due, Isabel Allen had become Mrs. Frank Howard. The stock and stand were sold out, and their debts paid, and my bachelor friend is as happy as a beautiful wife, with a heart full of love can make him.

FREE LABOR—THE NATURAL CAPITAL WHICH CONSTITUTES THE REAL WEALTH OF THIS GREAT COUNTRY, AND CREATES THAT INTELLIGENT POWER IN THE MASSES ALONE, TO BE RELIED ON AS THE BULWARK OF FREE INSTITUTIONS.—John C. Fremont's Letter of Acceptance.

Abuse of Gen. Cochran.

The strait Whig organs, the Bangor Journal and Bath Tribune, are both out in full tilt against Gen. Cochran of Waldoboro, who last year worked for the retention of the Whig party on State issues, in connection with them, pro, but who now sees his why clear to vote for Fremont and Dayton. Those papers which are now abusing Gen. Cochran know very well that he had the entire confidence of the leaders of the strait Whig party, and that he has the means in his possession of making an exposition of the motives and plans of those leaders, not very flattering to their consistency, touching the great principles of freedom. It is well known that the coalition last year, of the strait Whig party with the hunker democracy was distasteful to Gen. Cochran, but he at length so far overcame his scruples as to consent for once, still only once, specially on "State issues" to swallow the dose, censuring, in open convention in his own county, that he would never be caught such a sucker again.

Gen. Cochran has been earnest and sincere in all the deliberations he has made as a man and as a whig, in favor of freedom in the territories, and when the national issue is between freedom and the extension of slavery into the territories, he could not, in accordance with the cherished principles of his life and his entire political faith, do otherwise than support the party of freedom.

Gen. Cochran is a practical mechanic and has made the subject of the rig ts and benefits o f free labor of eminent study; and he knows that the just welfare of ten talent depends upon freedom being national and slavery local. He could not, hen, e may good conscience, do otherwise than to bring his political influence, mind when, thought, where it would result in the greatest substantial and just benefit to the free laboring men of our country. In this pub ic discussion he, step by step, proves and illustrates his position in a manner quite unanswerable by the creatures who, with type and in , the) is-sisting with abuse.

Gen. Cochran is a man, and in his question between freedom, whatever temporary effects the welfare and condition of mankind, he fully sympathizes. These sympath rs is is unwilling to waste in mere words to on or fifty citizens. His ide is one of action, he is impelled by high reward and moral sense to do something for freedom. It is ar nest in his head and his heart, thus in t Sok, and feel, and act. With him it is richer jet to prove his fidelity to principles to country, to mankind, than to be the puck heir of an hitherto party. The abuse of an office seeker was though bound to aid the slave power, indirectly, but thereby all the more effectually, we say the abuses of such presses as the Gen. Cochran no lasting injury. He will rise superior to all their censures and all their hatred. His cause is just, and he succeeds sure.

We tell the conductors of these presses, who even now, while sneering Whig virtue, are really in the debauch of slave ry, on the hunkerism, that they may yet provoke a full and complete exposure of the propositions and plans concocted and sinful purchase and to carry the measure of the Whig party into the bosom of the administration party.

The Bangor Journal attempts to get rid of its awkward position of repudiating Bickford's Fish Market, by talking highly of it as good man ners, its paper be virtue, character, wisdom, and all the rest of things. We expect let the fate of the frog in which Aesop tells the fable, be supposed his size corresponded to that of the ox. No one but the frog was deceived thereby, and the same result follows in this case.

In an address delivered before the Moore Co. Agricultural Society at Nash Carolina, and published in the Raleigh, C. Evening for July, 1856, the following paragraph is found, showing the kind of free soil which the Southern planter finds the most profitable:

"And, as a matter of interest to the South have an advantage in what we need our peculiar institution. It leads to thrift, of domestic slavery, for capital invested in that kind of property increases faster than in any other way.

Such admissions allow for what sort of South ward slavery extension on Kansas—to give a market for the surplus live stock of the latter.

Buchanan's Foreign Dark Spot. It is a matter of history that James Buchanan in a public speech in Pennsylvania once declared—if I had a drop of Democratic blood in my veins, I would tap them and let it out." A Harrison ship of 1840 would be for giving all to this fact.

When this old hat was new, Buchanan was the idol of democratic blood that it would make his whole body blue, [illegible] there is any of it—which this old hat was new.

The True State of Affairs relative to Kansas.

Our citizens have heard the truthful and revolting statements of facts in regard to affairs in Kansas from the lips of Gen. Pomroy and Mose Barker. An attempt has been made to give altogether a different impression by one of both of whom that he has been in Kansas, and who for political effect denies that there is any trouble from Border Ruffians, to those who are disposed to be peaceable. It is all necessary for us to say more at present, relative to this political schieming than to call the attention of our readers to the following clear and truthful statements of a party of young men who started recently for Kansas, to make one of the broad and beautiful prairies there, free homes for themselves and their offspring. We put in the names of the parties, some of them our own citizens, and all of them worthy of the fullest confidence.

The following letter has been received by Mr. Charles O. Record of this city:

Kansas Records: Perhaps you will think strange on the receipt of this, but I want to inform you how matters stand out here. There were 40 men and two women started from here for Leavenworth, on an Emigrant company with Mr. Custer of Warren, Mass., for our director. We had our forming interests along with us, and we also had our arms to defend ourselves against the bandit, that infest the territory. But we found robbers on the Missouri River. When we reached Boonville, we met among the Boats. We met the Star of the West with the disarmed party from Chicago, and we found we could not get up the river without trouble, so we went to the Clerk of the boat and told him we would pack our rifle and deliver them to him and send them back to St. Louis again—but when we got to Waverly, there was an armed band of Missourians and pearl and took them from the Clerk and gave a receipt to deliver them up on our return. Our Director then went and engaged our passage back to St. Louis again, for we could not land without fighting the whole Missouri—for at every landing we made we found a string of Ruffians armed with U. S. rifles, muskets, and cannon, determined to blow the boat out of the water if we attempted to land. They came on board armed with muskets, pistols and knives, and robbed us of our side arms, and swore they would shoot the first man that resisted. They then put a guard of seven Missouri on board to guard us down the river. But we are all determined to get to Kansas Territory. We arrived this afternoon (Sunday) at the mouth of the Kansas River, and found the steamer Grace Darling, and all the pilots North will not [illegible] us, we will make a stand through the country.

I send you a list of our Kansas which you will please to have published.

Yours in haste,

SAM'L M. STEVENS.

Whereas, We the undersigned citizens of the United States, and natives of the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois, at this present residence for the purposes of improving our future condition by securing permanent homes in the territory of Kansas, and whereas we have not only been robbed of our goods, and of our arms for defence, by subjects of Missouri, but have been forcibly prevented from entering the territory of Kansas, armed and controlled by the same Missouri and Southern hordes, therefore—

Resolved, That this forcible resistance to the transit of persons and property through Missouri is a virtual dissolution of the Union.

Resolved, That unless the encroachment to the perpetual passage of free States in free States, women and free State goods of every description, in the State of Missouri and territory of Kansas, in the form of large organized bands of men armed with cannon, rifles, U. S. muskets, pistols and Bowie knives, are removed, the threat of S. A. Douglas "We will subjugate Kansas if it should shed—We are abolished—The North is subjugated by the slave power

The Crisis at Washington.

A private letter from Washington to the editor of the N. Y. Courier, shows most clearly the present position of affairs at Washington, and the danger that the slave power may, by some of its infernal acts, secure Kansas as a Slave State. The following are extracts from the letter referred to:—

We are on the eve of a very grave crisis here, and much fear that the leaders of Northern opinion do not appreciate its importance.

There is great danger that we shall be baited on the wretchedly delusive scheme of the Toombs and Douglas coalition.

Our main need rousing up. Unless we have from the North some great and general movement depend upon it the Douglas, or, rather, the Toombs project, will pass the House. Believe nothing that you hear about the dissatisfaction of Southern men. They are all deeply anxious for the success of the scheme. It is peace—what they want, and beside bringing in Kansas as a Slave State will effect many other objects now unthought of. There is really occasion for very great alarm. All men of property, all interested in the maintenance of social and political order all desirous of peace, should give their influence, their time and their means, to prevent anything being done to consummate this conspiracy for forcing slavery upon Kansas, and bringing her by fraud into the Union.

This bill, on the part of Douglas, is merely a piece of quackery. He looks upon it as merely an excellent to allay irritation for a moment.—But Toombs, its author, regards and intends it as a bold and radical measure for settling everything in favor of slavery, and for ever closing the door to the North, which he desires and has long sought to effect.

* * * * * * *

There is, in my view, but one way of avoiding war, actual, raging, general civil war. It is firmness on the part of the North in resisting any and all attempts to appropriate to Slavery permanent advantages from the treacherous outrage of 1854. Abject submission will only gain us a brief respite. I know Southern men, in their public characters, well. I appreciate their policy thoroughly. They do mean to conquer the North, and they never made such rapid strides in that policy as during the two years since the passage of the Nebraska bill. We must arouse and organize a great Northern sentiment, and this first definite act to be performed is bringing the people to bear upon the Northern members to prevent the contemplated slave order on Kansas. The session must be brought to an end without any further trouble with slavery bills. Any armistice now would be spent by the South in concocting preparations for war. The time has come to draw all along the line, and if we do not bring down some of our adversaries, we are pretty certain to be trampled down ourselves.

Precedents for Senator Hamlin.

In regard to the different capacities in which Mr. Hamlin's nomination for Governor places him before the people, the Expositor of last week remarks:

But what of all this? What in reality is there before the people? What precedent is there in this State or elsewhere. When Senator Wright was nominated by the Democracy and run for Governor of the great State of New York, did he resign before his election to the office of Governor?

Certainly not. And yet he stood in the same three cornered unity before the people of which the Argus now speaks—of Senator, candidate for Governor, and advocate of his own election.

When Senator Sprague of this State was nominated for Governor by the Whigs, did he resign? Certainly not. Yet he stood in that same threefold capacity.

When John Fairfield was nominated for the office of Governor by the democrats of Maine did he resign his seat in Congress? and was it demanded of him for the nominee to resign his seat?

Certainly not. He not only did not resign his seat in Congress, but he filled the threefold capacity of Representative in Congress, candidate for Governor, and advocate of his own election until elected.

He not only did this up to his election to the office of Governor in September, but in the following November he appeared at Washington, holding on all to this office of Representative in Congress and continued to do so up to the time of receiving pay for it, until the 4th day of March next month, which is the date of his resignation, and until he had only time enough to reach Augusta and meet the Legislature to enter on the office of Governor.

Why the devil this mawkish sensibility about Mr. Hamlin, all at once?

It is charitable Gov. Wells to appoint some craven-hearted sycophant to the slave power, to fill the vacancy that sought to be fooled out of Mr. Hamlin.

Mr. Hamlin is in the hands of the people who are his friends. They say his resignation is not to be demanded, and is not intended by the nominee. On the contrary they say, stand at your post in the Senate. When that body shall adjourn, then they want you to take hold with them, in no less earnestness than if not nominated, and uphold the glorious cause of freedom.

And all the while believe he will do. We believe it because all this, and nothing else, he ought to do. It is duty, not expediency or sensibility that now points out his course of conduct. Not to those, we repeat, any thing of precedent against it, but every thing of precedent it, to sustain and commend him in it, at this crisis.

"YOU HAS TURN IT, BUCHANAN!" The following anecdote told by Hon. Jose R. Poinsett, a leading democrat of South Carolina, appears in the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle:

A party of Gentlemen were dining together in Washington, among whom were Mr Clay and Mr. Buchanan. Mr. Buchanan had just been appointed Minister to Russia, and was making some inquiries of Mr. Clay about costume, the character, cost, &c. Mr. Clay told him that he had one, for which he had no use, and would give it to him. Mr Buchanan thanked him, but said, as he had worn it, it must be tarnished. Mr. Clay replied in that manner which was peculiar to him, "O, but you can turn it, Buchanan." The discomfiture of Buchanan was complete, as the conversation took place just after Mr. B. had turned his political coat in a most unblushing manner.

The Hon. F. P. Blair, Jr., a candidate for Congress of the Benton Democracy, from the St. Louis district, says in a published card:—

If the "abrupt law is intended to be a slogan, then, thank me that I do not unite in the popularity. Neither am I, in any sense, in favor of the extension of slavery. I have always denounced both, and think that neither can be so severely denounced."

An exchange paper says: There is a misgiving, sickening sensation in the land, and the question of the utmost importance is, where are we and in what direction are to be set. Can it be believed, "The people or The [illegible] Democracy" for plaintiff.—[illegible] for the defendant, Verdict [illegible] The costs will be given in Nov.

Buford has Resigned.—Preston S. Brooks is no longer a member of the House of Representatives at Washington.

The question of expulsion came up in the House on Monday, and the vote stood 121 for expulsion and 95 opposed—which gave a majority in favor of expulsion, but not a two-thirds vote which is required to expel a member. Mr. Brooks upon the vote being declared immediately resigned his seat.

We are glad that the country is no longer to be disgraced by having such a cowardly ruffian in Congress.

Letter from Hon. Josiah Quincy.

The venerable John Quincy, of whom Boston has been proud on days gone by, and of whom she will be proud yet in days to come, has written the following letter to the Young Men's Fremont Club of this city. When we read it, we know just how the heroes of the revolution would talk to us if they could rise from their graves.

Messrs. S. Jo Swett, J. H. Lane Jr., Wm. H. Gulic Jr., Corresponding Secretaries of the Young American Fremont Club.

Gentlemen:—I participate in your eagerness on, I thank God the prospect of death is not yet upon the liberties of the Free States. The young blood begins to move. The question depending is—are the slaveholders or the free States hereafter to govern this Union. In the free States united, their success is certain. Be on your guard. The slaveholders have governed this Union almost uninterruptedly for nearly fifty years, by one arm—by buying on the free. States what was corrupt, by dividing in them, what was sound. Be on your guard. There is no discussion in their counting. Pay no regard to their menaces or influences. Whatever is put up in opposition to Fremont and Dayton, is put up in connection with the slaveholders.—The object will be to divide the free States, to throw the first question from the people into Congress where the slaveholders are masters. He first had united. Now is the time, now the hour. The seven of the time cannot be misunderstood. The slaveholders mean to continue to govern this Union hereafter as they have done before—by dividing and corrupting. If they succeed, after the demonstration they have given of character and purposes, the free States are slaves and deserve to be to the worst of all possible masters. Heaven never fails to punish with severe retribution, a people who are negligent of it talents to the opportunities it puts into their hands. God and your country are with you, my young friends. Bush will bless you. Yours, Josiah Quincy.

P. S.—I send you thirty dollars to aid in defraying the expenses of your organization. If that is not my proper to, let me know what is, and I will remit it.

The Hon. Thomas J. Marshall has removed from Kentucky to Chicago. A large body of Kentuckians living at Chicago invited him to deliver a political address, just such as he pleased, and he accordingly made such a speech on Saturday evening last. He said he was discontented with all political parties and without political aspirations. Speaking of the great question now at issue—the extension of slavery—he said, the word slave found no place in the constitution; why, he would not say. The ordinance of 1787 was the means of securing freedom to the magnificent domain northwest of the Ohio river, and no man questioned its constitutionality. The Missouri Compromise was made in 1820 to settle a vexed question.—The line of 36°30' was drawn by real big giants—an illusion to the Little Giant," which drew forth much applause. There were giants in those days, he added. Henry Clay gave the might of his voice and influence to secure its enactment. And man then, and none until recently, denied or doubted its constitutionality. Benton was in the field which erased it. He himself predicted then the results which have followed. The Territory is now in a state of anarchy, and all this is the result of the Nebraska bill.

One of the banners displayed at the Buchanan meeting in the New York City Park, last evening, had the following inscription:

"First we Polked, them,
Then we Pierced them,
Now we'll Buck them."

You are right, Mr. Banner-bearer, in your classification. Polk, Pierce and Buchanan are of the same piece. They belong to the same clusters—and driven by the same whip-per-in. No doubt Buchanan would carry out and complete the system of slave propagandism inaugurated by Polk, and so efficiently advanced by Pierce. It is just that idea that makes the negro-drivers of the South take so readily to this new doctrine—it is the dread of that which makes the free men of the North so detest and distrust Buchanan.

Reduction of Postage to Van Diemen's Land and Western Australia.—We are requested to state that the British postage charge on letters between the United Kingdom and the British colonies of Van Diemen's Land and Western Australia having been recently reduced to sixpence the half-ounce, all letters and packets conveyed by packet or by private ship, the single rate of letter postage between the United States and either of those colonies will thereafter, be 35 instead of 45 cents—the postage, in all cases, to be paid in advance. This rate of, however, includes only the transit postage to which the letters may be liable for conveyance through a foreign State other than Great Britain and her colonies.—Washington Union, July 10.

Some two hundred of the leading Democrats of Onondaga county have signed a call, asking their fellow Democrats, who cannot act as adherents to the Cincinnati platform, to meet in consultation and action, at Syracuse on the 23d of July. The Cincinnati platform is denounced in the call, is being adopted under the direction and to suit the views of filibusters and slavery extensionists, regardless of the sentiment and views of the great mass of the people of the North.

"If any one event," says a Chicago correspondent of the Evening Post, "is more certain than another, it is that Lincoln will cast the next electoral vote for Fremont and Dayton.—The Old Line Democrats—such as John Wentworth and Mr. Swett—who are now canvassing the State for the Republican ticket, have the only question involved in any doubt is the size of the majority—the excess over 20,000."

The Boston Courier is more distressed at the disposition of the Abolitionist and Independent Whigs to sustain Fremont, in order that the country may be rescued from the miserable rule of present unfortunate administration. It bowls savagely at the utters of Messrs. Wallace and Clifford to the Harmony meeting in Springfield, also at the admirable resolutions of that convention, which were written and reported by a straight Whig.

Wendell Phillips of Boston, in a speech made on the fourth, a lauding to Col. Fremont, said he had used but one objection made to him. The Boston Post complained that one of his accusations was that a lie. And it is not surprising, said the speaker, that every Democratic paper should object to that.

The papers begin to bring accounts of the recent riots at Bejuica, Valladolid, and other cities. They seem to have been serious and of the magnitude of an insurrection. The high price of food was its ostensible cause, but they were really fomented by political and industrial Numerous arrests were made and prisoners shot. Singer's Sewing Machines.

ALL PERSONS who desire to obtain full and reliable information respecting SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES—their merits, adaptation to fabrics, improvements, mode of working, means of procuring them, and all other information—can do so by applying at our office,

No. 323 Broadway, New York,

by letter or in person.

I. M. SINGER & CO'S GAZETTE,

This paper is devoted entirely to the Sewing Machine interest. Copies will be supplied gratis to all interested.

N. B.—The unprecedented success of our Sewing Machines has induced several fraudulent imitations of them, both in the improvements of our patents, and of other well known inventions. Suits for the infringement of our patents have recently been decided in our favor in the U. S. Circuit Courts in New York and New Jersey. In these suits the great principle of

Holding down the Fabric to be Sewed to the Surface of the Work is, by a winding process, which is used in all Sewing Machines—has been fully established. The Wheeler & Wilson and the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines, as we allege each infringe three distinct patents owned by us. We have also sustained them in several of the U. S. Courts, which will soon be tried. We hereby caution the public not to buy such infringing machines, as they are liable to be compelled by law to stop using them, and to pay damages.

Special Agents wanted to market sales of our improved sewing machines. To persons of good character for the business, a rare opportunity for profitable and pleasant employment is offered.

New and improved machines exchanged on liberal terms for old machines of every kind.
